In past few years of my experience, I have learned that in this field it is not working alone, it needs team work & good communications, this entire thing will never end. In every project or task I did, I always have a good & bad experiences. New people to deal with and a new skill to give but at the same time a new skill to learn. It's all about self-discipline, common sense, listening, respecting and understanding the system of the business. At the end of the day the most important things is the acceptance and satisfaction of a work done & enjoying it.
